Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****.Excerpt from Poems for the People In presenting my Poems for the People in book form, I, as is usually customary, will give a brief description of my genealogy. I was born June 15th, 1861, at Darien, Conn. My mother also was a native of Darien. My grandmother, whose maiden name was Edith E. Wickes, was born in Huntington, Long Island. She was the daughter of Captain Nathaniel Wickes of Huntington, Long Island. My mother's father, Peter Lineburgh, was a miller, owning and operating the first grist mill in Darien. The mill of course being of the old-fashioned kind that in the early pioneer days of Connecticut was propelled by wind and water, with long, sweeping arms that revolved in the air and a huge wooden wheel similar in looks to the stern wheel on the Mississippi packets or the side wheel that still may be seen on the New York and Norfolk ferryboats. My ancestors on my mother's side of the family were, in the main, descendants of the old Huguenot stock that blazed and paved the pilgrims trail of religion through the wilderness of the new world - America. My descendants on my mother's side were very devout and pious; they being staunch and loyal advocates and supporters of old Blue Laws of Connecticut. They owned slaves during the time that slavery was in vogue in the New England states, but set their slaves free long before the Civil War. The Wickes and the Dennis, both early settlers of Huntington, L.I., and the first of that name to come to America, can be called the foundation of my early ancestry on my...
